

Defying set Boundaries

In an effort to not to be typecast into any particular stream of architecture, Ashwin Alva as an architect explores all the options offered by the design industry. He and his firm collectively aim at tackling each project on its inherent merits and demands and deliver solutions, which blur boundaries between all typologies of design.

Text: Namita Goel

Images: courtesy the architect

Day time appearance of the artificial water body, and pyramid through which the light is sourced.

In order to create a personalised outlook for his firm, Ashwin Alva from his hand-made drawings to the services he provides, makes his clients comfortable and wanted. In 2000, he started his practice and in these six years, he has completed numerous projects. From commercial complexes to creating mansions, he has been raising the bar of performance. It's like a never-ending cycle. Each of his projects differs from the other but the only thing constant is the change. Let's read through few of his innovations in the field of architecture in the last few years.